0DETAILED ACTIONClaim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-5, 7-10, 12-16, and 18-20 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Norman et al. in view of West et al.

Norman et al. disclose a poseable doll having articulated limbs measuring less than 8 centimeters (which is between 3 inches and eight inches, col. 1, lines 63-67). The doll has garments made of polymeric material (col. 1, lines 28-45) that may be removeably donned on the doll (col. 1, lines 25-27); that article may be made from rubber (col. 1, lines 25-27); the article as a low stiction interaction with the doll and the flexibility and form of the article allow uninhibited movement of the moveable joints of the doll (col. 2, lines 36-46). The reference further teaches that one garment can be donned over another, e.g, a jacket over a dress (col. 2, lines 45-46).

Norman et al. do not disclose the polymeric material having a 100% modulus of greater than 220psi (1517k Nm⁻²); the 200% modulus being above 330psi (2275 kNm⁻²), and the 300% modulus above 440psi (3034 kNm⁻²).

Art Unit: 3712

West et al. teaches sheeting material in the form of chlorinated olefin having a 100% modulus greater than 220 psi (col. 5, lines 65-67).

It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to provide the polymeric material having a 100% modulus greater than 220 psi, since West et al. state in the Abstract that such a modification would provide high tensile strength and unexpectedly low stiffness to the material.

Furthermore, it would have obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to provide a polymeric material having the abovementioned claimed values of a 200% modulus being above 330 psi, and a 300% modulus being above 440 psi, since it has been held that discovering an optimum value of a result effective variable involves only routine skill in the art.

In re Boesch, 617 F.2d 272, 205 USPQ 215 (CCPA 1980)

Claim 17 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Norman et al. in view of Shannon.

Norman et al. discloses the claimed invention except for the doll being formed of polypropylene.

Shannon teaches a doll formed of polypropylene.(col. 4, lines 55-57).

It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to have the doll formed of polypropylene as taught by Shannon, since Shannon states col. 2, lines 57-59, that such a modification would permit surface details to be printed.

Allowable Subject Matter

Claims 6 and 11 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

Response to Arguments

Applicant's arguments with respect to the claims have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.
